

HIV Criminalization and Women

Last updated: October 28, 2021

Together, we can change the course of the HIV epidemic...one woman at a time.

What Is HIV Criminalization?

- No one should be punished simply because they have a health condition
  - But many areas of the world have laws and practices that unfairly punish people living with HIV
  - This is often called HIV criminalization

What Is HIV Criminalization?

- 75 countries (as of May 2019) have HIV-specific laws
- Some areas do not have HIV criminalization laws
  - General criminal laws have been used or charges increased because someone is living with HIV
- People with HIV can face criminal charges for engaging in acts not considered criminal if done by an HIVnegative person
  - E.g.: consensual sex with another adult

What Is HIV Criminalization?

Most known HIV criminalization cases are not about HIV transmission

- Focused on alleged HIV non-disclosure (someone claims their partner did not tell them that they were living with HIV)
  - Pits the word of two partners against one another
  - Almost impossible to truly prove
- Sometimes there is no, or an extremely low, risk of HIV transmission

Where Do These Laws Come From?

- Laws were originally based on myths and misconceptions about HIV transmission
- When they are applied, they reinforce:
  - Fear, discrimination, and stigma against people living with HIV
  - Dangerous misinformation about how HIV is transmitted -and can be prevented

Where Do These Laws Come From?

- World's first HIV-related prosecutions and laws happened in the mid-late 1980s
  - At that time, HIV was truly a death sentence for millions
  - Laws were an attempt to control a raging epidemic that virtually no one understood
- Spread the myth that people with HIV were dangerous "monsters," and that risk of "intentional infection" was high

Where Do These Laws Come From?

- Effective HIV drugs now extend and improve the lives of people living with HIV, reduce transmission risk to effectively zero
- However, trend of HIV criminalization has increased in recent years
- This fact makes it even clearer that these laws are based on irrational fears, not current scientific knowledge about HIV

What Is the Impact of These Laws?

- No evidence of any public health benefit
- Increase stigma and discrimination
- Make it harder for people to be tested, trust health professionals, get treatment if needed
- Most laws only require that a person knew they were living with HIV in order to prosecute them
  - Punishes people for healthful behavior of getting tested
- Especially true of whoever in a relationship knew their HIV status first (most often the woman)

Do These Laws Help Women?

- Common argument for HIV criminalization laws:
  - "They protect women from partners who might be dishonest about their HIV status -- or violent towards them, increasing their HIV vulnerability"
- These laws do not promote honesty, heal violence, or address epidemic of gender-based violence and uneven power dynamics
  - More often used as tools of abuse, harassment, or coercion

Do These Laws Help Women?

- Women who are prosecuted, or even accused, in HIV criminal cases may lose housing, child custody, access to services, and much more
  - E.g. U.S. state of Louisiana, a person must register as a sex offender -- makes it difficult to rebuild her life
- Communities already subject to over-policing and incarceration bear highest burden of HIV charges
  - E.g. sex workers (or those perceived to be engaging in sex work), communities of color

What about people who "intentionally infect" others with HIV? Shouldn't they be punished?

- Specific intent to harm by transmitting HIV is very rare
- Not disclosing does not mean "intentionally infecting"
  - Sex or contact with a person living with HIV does not automatically = transmission
  - Saying "I am living with HIV" is not always a safe option
- Opposing stigmatizing HIV laws helps make HIV disclosure safer
  - Could join advocacy group or educate people in community

What if someone living with HIV, including a partner, rapes or molests someone else?

- Laws against sexual violence ought to be enforced in these cases
  - Often poorly enforced, especially when rape happens within marriage
- Criminalizing people because of their HIV status does not protect women from sexual assault
- Rape is a crime HIV is not a crime

My partner didn't tell me he was living with HIV; now I am living with it. Isn't my only option to send him to jail?

- Understandable that you are angry. However:
  - Living with HIV does not have to be a death sentence;
    prosecuting someone could be
  - Changing your mind after filing a complaint may not stop a prosecution
- Restorative justice and similar approaches may help heal rifts resulting from HIV transmission

How can we use "Undetectable Equals Untransmittable" to fight these outdated laws?

- Do share current scientific information about HIV
  - U=U helps show why removing barriers to HIV care and treatment – including stigmatizing laws – is key
- Be careful not to spread false idea that, without HIV drugs and an undetectable viral load, legal punishment of people living with HIV is acceptable
  - HIV criminalization is harmful to public health
  - Never appropriate, no matter the person's viral load

How can we use "Undetectable Equals Untransmittable" to fight these outdated laws?

- Worth noting: Women may have a harder time getting their viral loads to undetectable
  - More likely to be diagnosed later in life than men
  - Prioritize health of others over their own
  - Higher rates of violence, poverty, and the instability that comes with them
    - Can make it hard to be consistent with medication

What if someone brings charges against me for HIV nondisclosure?

- Know your rights: In the U.S., you do not have to speak with anyone without a lawyer present
- Get help: You must be represented by people who understand HIV and HIV criminalization
  - Contact a local HIV organization, legal clinic or anticriminalization group
- Know that you are not alone: Many people have faced such charges; a global movement is fighting these laws
