Why Race Matters

Race matters when it comes to HIV – and not just for women of color

- “Female face of AIDS” = Black or Brown woman
 - Mostly sub-Saharan Africa and Asia
- Trans women especially affected

thewellproject

Why Race Matters

- US: 1 in 5 new HIV diagnoses in women
- American Indian/Alaska Native women
 - High rates
- Asian/Pacific Islander women
 - Not talked about
 - Cultural factors may increase vulnerability
- Decline in HIV diagnoses among women
 - But: rates still highest among women of color

What Are Health Disparities?

Health disparity: “the biological expression of social inequalities” – Paul Farmer (global HIV activist and medical anthropologist)

- Difference in health linked to unequal or unjust social condition
 - Higher rate of a disease among certain groups despite prevention efforts
 - Differences according to gender, race, education or income level, disability, sexual orientation, region, and more

Social determinants of health linked to health disparities

- Social realities impacting physical health
 - Poverty
 - Lack of education
 - Racism

thewellproject

What Is Race?

- Usually thought of as physical traits or ancestry
 - Skin color, eye shape, region where ancestors are from
 - Doesn't explain health differences in same geographic area
- Race is a social category, not a biological one
 - Way to explain differences in how people live in society
 - Differences affect treatment, which affects social conditions
- Powerful idea that has been used to:
 - Separate people
 - Make opportunities available to some but not others

thewellproject

What Is Racism?

- System in which people are valued differently because of their race
- – Unfairly disadvantages some individuals and communities
 - Provides unearned advantage to others
 - Damages the entire society
 - Wasted human resources
- Greater likelihood of acquiring HIV related to factors that structure how people live
 - Not related to physical differences

What Is Racism?

- Racism causes stress; has been shown to be a form of trauma
- Racism is not just about individual behavior; a person who is white may:
 - Have many friends of different races
 - Have never intentionally harmed someone because of their race
 - Still benefit from a racist system that values lives based on race
- Being antiracist (against racism):
 - Does not just mean white people treating individual people of color well
 - Means disagreeing with ways that racial bias shows up
 - Means recognizing ways we may benefit from systems that are biased against others (privilege)

“I Live in the Basement”

“I live in the basement: the lowest floor of the social systems we have here in America.”

“I ... first learn[ed] about the perceived differences in skin color, notwithstanding our commonality or upbringing.”

“Women all around me were delegated to the floor below in their homes, at their jobs, and in the public.”

“When I started transitioning ..., the basement door became sealed.”

– Aryah Lester, “I Live in the Basement,” on A Girl Like Me

[Trigger warning: The blog entry linked above contains descriptions of sexual violence and discrimination.]

What Is Privilege?

- A set of unearned, often invisible benefits experienced by people who fit into social groups that have power
 - White race; middle or upper class; male; heterosexual; documented citizen; native English speaker
- For example, people with privilege can assume that:
 - People in history class and textbooks are same race, gender, sexual orientation as you
 - Your failures will not be thought of as being due to your race or gender
 - You don't have to think about race, class, gender, sexual orientation, disabilities, etc., daily

thewellproject

What Is Privilege?

"I am a white woman, I have privilege. I recognize that we don't have to have a hashtag for white lives. ... Racism towards white people is up for discussion and it pains me!"

"The statistics of HIV speak volumes don't they? Maybe I need to shout it louder, as my white voice is more listened to!"

– MelPainter2014, "#BlackLivesMatter," on A Girl Like Me

Things to Remember About Privilege

- Often easier to notice oppression than privilege
 - Being mistreated leaves deeper impression than fair treatment
- Privilege doesn't mean you didn't work hard
 - Your life may not be easy, but may be easier than others' in certain ways
- Privilege isn't "special advantages"; it's basic fairness
 - Problem isn't that a privileged person gets more than they deserve, but that others who don't have privilege get less than they deserve
- Privilege is related to power systems not individual experiences
 - Having Obama as president didn't end racism
- Privilege and oppression don't cancel each other out
 - Can be oppressed by poverty but still benefit from being white

thewellproject

What Is Intersectionality?

- The idea that many parts of a person's identity impact their life at the same time
 - Some aspects give them privilege, some lead them to experience oppression
 - Parts of a person's identity cannot be separated
 - All women experience sexism, but experience different for Black and white women because experience is also affected by racism
- Don't treat just HIV, also address intersectional issues

Taking Action, Making Change

- Recognize privilege and use it for change
 - Having privilege is not usually something a person chooses
 - If you have privilege, you can choose not to be silent
- United we stand
 - Learn from the HIV community's history of challenging privilege
- Put those most impacted front and center
 - When those most impacted by an issue speak about it, listen!
- Join a community
 - For example, A Girl Like Me
- Take action
 - Connect with advocacy groups

Taking Action, Making Change

"The HIV epidemic in this country will end when America commits to addressing the underlying conditions which enable HIV to thrive, such as racism and poverty."

-- Positive Women's Network-USA leaders Vanessa Johnson and Waheedah Shabazz-El, National Black HIV/AIDS Awareness Day 2016
