About Women Like Us – Aging Positively

Women Like Us – Aging Positively focuses on increasing overall health and wellness among women aging with HIV by increasing social connectedness and access to relevant health information. This program aims to expand access to health information that centers the needs of women aging with HIV, improve patient-provider interactions and relationships, and decrease isolation. It also works to provide opportunities for women to connect with each other through The Well Project's network, build health literacy, and expand leadership and capacity building among women aging with HIV.

Women Like Us – Aging Positively ensures that The Well Project's vision – of a world in which women living with or vulnerable to HIV have the information, support, and tools they need to advocate for their health and well-being, and live free from stigma – is inclusive of women aging with HIV.

We encourage you to check this page regularly for programming updates, including interactive online discussions about aging among women living with HIV, a private Facebook group, and educational resources for women aging with HIV, including talking points to help guide discussions with providers. All coming soon!

Aging Positively: Taking Action Across the Lifespan – WATCH! 2.0

The focus of growing older with HIV should not just be about managing the aging process itself, but rather on our overall wellness. This means physical health, mental well-being, and a sense of social connectedness that allows us to age well and thrive, even as we live with HIV. How to apply lived experience, wisdom, and planning are just a few of the tools we have to advocate for ourselves and others as we look forward to aging. We explore these topics and more on the sixth session of WATCH! 2.0.

Aging Positively: Health Screenings for Women With HIV: Leadership Exchange LIVE

Some health conditions are more common in women living with HIV across the gender spectrum as we grow older. It is important to be screened for those, sometimes at a younger age than recommended for people who are not living with HIV.

Check out this enlightening episode of Leadership Exchange LIVE, and listen in as Eileen Scully, MD, PhD, and The Well Project's stakeholder liaison, Bridgette Picou, LVN, ACLPN, discuss medical health screenings and vaccinations.

HIV, Women, and Menopause: Leadership Exchange LIVE

The Well Project believes in promoting not only health literacy, but also health information, and strives to fill in gaps where they exist. The October 2023 episode of Leadership Exchange LIVE examines menopause among women living with HIV. We talked about what it is and what it is not, and learned about some exciting research.

Our stakeholder liaison, Bridgette Picou, LVN, was joined by Sara E. Looby, PhD, CNP-BC, FAAN, Harvard Medical School Metabolism Unit and Yvonne L. Munn Center for Nursing Research; Sara H Bares, MD, FIDSA, associate professor of medicine, Division of Infectious Diseases, UNMCC; and Gina Brown, RSW, who help us navigate this topic that is often left out of research and conversations that are vital for women's physical and mental health.

Combatting Loneliness and Isolation with HIV - Building A Village

On the first Women Like Us - Aging Positively episode of A Girl Like Me LIVE, The Well Project's stakeholder liaison, Bridgette Picou, LVN, ACLPN, joined long-time The Well Project collaborator and fierce advocate, Gina Brown, RSW, to discuss the different types of loneliness, factors unique to women that can increase these feelings, and the importance of building community as we age with HIV.

Ongoing Conversations

There's a Place on Social Media for Women Like Us

As part of our program Women Like Us – Aging Positively, The Well Project is excited to announce a new group on Facebook. This group provides women across the gender spectrum with a space to talk about their journey, share open dialogue, and ask the questions that matter as we age with HIV.
